Subject: Clarification on UL Onboarding and Process

Dear Joshua,

Thanks for reaching out. I'm writing to clarify the onboarding and operational process I experienced with UL, as you requested.

Throughout my affiliation with UL, the management frequently changed, and with each change, the approach to engaging auditors seemed to shift.

When I initially entered into an agreement with UL, the process was quite straightforward. After completing some training, a single observation, and one practice audit (with Claire), I was cleared to conduct audits independently. Coincidentally, your audit was the one I observed to calibrate my own auditing process. There was no formal procedure for obtaining a company cell phone, laptop, or even a separate official email address. This was a significant difference from my experiences with other companies. In fact, I believe I raised this issue with UL at the time, as it made it difficult to reach out to clients or officially confirm my affiliation with UL. An official company email would have resolved this problem.

Regarding audit documentation, we were instructed to download folders from a Qualtrax library (UL's platform). I was advised to keep these folders readily accessible on my personal computer in case an audit site lacked internet access. We constantly downloaded updated zip folders whenever changes or new standards were introduced, and I was never told to delete any of this documentation from my personal computer.

I hope this explanation of my experience with UL sheds light on the information you needed.
